NEW! Film and Media Studies Bachelor's Degree

Humber has developed a new Bachelor's of Applied Arts in Film and Media Production, which combines theory with an emphasis on writing, storytelling and the creation of compelling visual narratives. The program also teaches students about multi-platform delivery to take advantage of new content channels such as hand-held devices and the web. "In addition to being skilled at developing stories in new ways, there's also a need for students to have critical-thinking skills and awareness, and the program's strong element of liberal arts courses ensures that," says filmmaker, Lori Spring. "The degree format raises the bar academically to create higher achieving students." The program is keeping up with changes in the media world but it's not throwing out the baby with the bathwater. It combines a solid grounding in film with new methods of telling stories. Careers in film directing, cinematography, writing and editing, as well as gaming and writing for interactive television websites are just some of the areas that await graduates from this program, which will be available in the fall of 2009. For more information on the program, contact the associate dean of the School of Media Studies & Information Technology at basil.guinane@humber.ca.

Meet one of our Full Tuition Scholarship Winners!

"When I came to Canada I wanted to find a school that had great media programs. I didn't know how to find out which school was the best for me, so I started to ask many different people. Most people told me that I should apply to Humber College. So then, I decided to visit the campus. In my visit I had the chance to meet the coordinator for the Broadcasting Television/Videography program. I was not only impressed by the facilities, but also the way the coordinator received me there. I already have a degree in Journalism from Brazil, but since my second year of university I dreamed of coming to Canada to study broadcast television.

When I applied for the scholarship I thought my chances were not very high, and I was very surprised when I got the e-mail from Humber. This is for sure one of my biggest achievements and my parents are very proud of me. I am having an amazing time at Humber. I love the course, my classmates and my teachers. I really feel that as an international student we are treated in a very special way, with all the support needed. My goal now is to enjoy my course and my time in Canada as much as I can. I am very happy to be here and now I can see that I couldn't have made a better choice!"

The Humber International Ambassador Program

The International Student Ambassador program is designed to assist new and returning international students with adjusting to college life in Canada. Ambassadors help students adjust to their new environment by teaching international students how to use the transit system, open a bank account, meet new people, discover the sights of Toronto and understand Canadian culture. Ambassadors are dedicated to helping international students adjust to their new environment and succeed at school. Conversation cafes, potluck lunches and other events are just some examples of the activities initiated and implemented by the International Student Ambassadors.

Update: The New Post-Graduate Work Permit
Issue 4, October 31, 2008

As part of the Immigration Act of Canada and effective April 21, 2008, international students are now permitted to work in Canada for up to 3 years (if their program of study is two or more years) and for 1 year (if their program of study is less than 2 years) following the completion of their studies. Students are also now eligible
